Re: Coronavirus Updates

We’ve received many questions from family members regarding when we will reinstate visitation. Deputy Secretary Joel Hrabe, facility wardens and several others are working hard to begin planning for how and when to safely begin in-person visitation. There are many factors that will need to be weighed and we will only reopen visitation when we know the risk is minimal. It only takes one person to bring the virus into the prison and many of our visitors come from other parts of the state and even out of state. While we don’t know yet exactly what the process will look like, I want to advise everyone that visiting will likely look very different than the process that we are all familiar with and know. There is no set date at this time for when we will reopen visiting activities, but we will be monitoring state, county and city information for each of our prisons so that we can make an informed decision. We will share more details as we have them.

This has been a bit of a more “normal” week for many of us. Things are starting to slow down and we are seeing a return of some of our daily routine. With that you will see a switch next week from a daily communication from me, to a biweekly message, that will go out on Tuesdays and Fridays. At some point down the road we may scale back to one communication per week, but I know that communicating regularly with you is important and I will commit to continuing for the foreseeable future.
